Celebrations

Celebrations are events that are held on special occasions. Some are events from the past that are still celebrated. Others celebrate important times in our lives, or activities such as music.

Birthdays are special events that many people celebrate.

Some celebrations involve only a few people. Others involve whole cities or countries. Large celebrations take place across the world.

New Year’s Eve is celebrated all around the world with fireworks.
What are national and world celebrations?

National celebrations are events where a whole country takes part. A world celebration is an event that takes place across the world.

Many countries, such as Israel, celebrate the day they were discovered or became independent.

Many national celebrations remember special events in a country’s history. World celebrations can be held for religious reasons, or to celebrate a culture or sport.

Many religions have big world celebrations, such as Catholic World Youth Day.
Australia Day, Australia

Australia Day is a national celebration of when Europeans first came to Australia to live. It takes place every year on 26 January. This was when the First Fleet arrived in Australia in 1788.

Many Indigenous Australians do not celebrate Australia Day. This is because they believe it was the day their land was invaded. Some people call this day Invasion Day.

Some Australians celebrate their country and culture on Australia Day.

Many Indigenous Australians hold separate events on 26 January.
The Fourth of July is an American national celebration. It celebrates the day the Declaration of Independence was signed in 1776. It is also called Independence Day.

The Fourth of July is a holiday, and schools and shops are closed. Many Americans celebrate their history and culture with their families and friends.

Children take part in Fourth of July parades in many American towns and cities.
Independence Day, India

India celebrates its independence from Britain on 15 August every year. The Prime Minister gives a speech to the Indian people. There are also flag-raising ceremonies and parades.

Some Indigenous people of the Americas hold separate events on Columbus Day.
Anzac Day, Australia and New Zealand

On Anzac Day, people go to dawn services to remember those who died in wars. Parades are a very important part of Anzac Day.

Anzac Day is held in Australia, New Zealand and some Pacific islands. It is held each year on 25 April. This was when Anzac soldiers landed at Gallipoli, Turkey, in 1915.

On Anzac Day members of the military take part in parades. There are also special acts to remember those killed or injured. These include laying wreaths at war memorials.

Parades are a very important part of Anzac Day.
Guy Fawkes Night, United Kingdom

Guy Fawkes Night is a celebration that began in the United Kingdom. It remembers a man called Guy Fawkes. He tried to blow up the Houses of Parliament on 5 November 1605.

Guy Fawkes Night was celebrated with bonfires and fireworks for many years. Today, this is not allowed in most countries because fireworks can be dangerous.

In many places, people once lit bonfires on Guy Fawkes Night.
Remembrance Day

Remembrance Day is held in many countries on 11 November each year. This was the day World War I ended in 1918. Remembrance Day ceremonies honour people killed in wars.

On Remembrance Day people wear poppies as a sign of remembrance. Poppies grew on the battlefields in Europe during World War I.
Kwanzaa

Kwanzaa (say kwan-za) is a world celebration of African culture. It is held for one week in December. Kwanzaa is celebrated in countries with large numbers of African people.

Kwanzaa started in America in 1966, but has spread to many other countries. During the week people have large feasts and give presents.
